US Communists Must Register, Tool Of Soviets

WASHINGTON UPB — The U. S. Communist party must register as a tool of the Soviet Union by midnight tonight or face an avalanche of government action.

Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy said over the weekend the party had notified the Justice Department it would ignore the deadline for registration under the 1960 Internal Security Act.

Thus the Justice Department expects another long round of legal fighting with the Communists. But it has not yet been decided how or when the battle will start.

The law, which Kennedy reiterated he would enforce, requires the party to register with the names and addresses of its officers and a list of its printing presses.

Kennedy told reporters that no decision has been made as to what the government will do first. The question of when to do it has been complicated by other facets of the law.

If the party itself does not register, the law then requires that the party leaders register by midnight Nov. 30. If they fail to register, the burden then shifts to the netire membership, estimated at 10,000, which would have to register by Dec. 20.

Might Delay Action

The government could, if it wished, seek an indictment this week against the party if its fails to register. But some persons have argued that the government would have a stronger case if it permits the full 30-day period to elapse before launching action.

Failure to comply with the law subjects the party, its leaders and the membership to fines of $10,000 a day for every day they fail to register. In addition, the individuals would be liable to five years in prison for every day they fail to register.

Three Escape With $118,000 In Loot

By United Press International

Three daring bandits, armed with a machine gun and pistols, held up a Massachusetts bank today and three other gunmen robbed an Indiana branch bank after kidnapping the manager from his home.

The loot in the two robberies amounted to more than $118,000.

The halloween-masked men surprised employees of the Garden City Trust Co. in the plush Chestnut Hill section of Newton, Mass., when they reported for work this morning. They held the employees at gunpoint until a time clock opened the vault automatically and then looted it of more than $88,000.

Police said the bandits apparently had broken into the bank during the weekend and waited until the employees arrived. None of the five persons held by the gunmen was injured. The bandits escaped in the bank treasurer's car after the robbery, the second since the bank opened two years ago.

At Gary, Ind., three men invaded the home of bank manager Robert Welke and forced him to drive with them to the Glen Park branch of the Gary Trust and Savings Bank. After looting the bank, the bandits tied up Welke and escaped in his car.

A bank official said the loot amounted to $60,000. It included "heavy payrolls."

Welke's wife and child were at home when the gunmen broke in but they were reported unharmed.

It was the third time in a year that Welke's branch bank had been robbed. A gunman escaped with $89,083 last Jan. 28 but was captured the following day.

In a third bank holdup a young man escaped with $7,000 from a robbery. A gunman escaped with a sidekick's teller's window saying he had a gun. The teller at the Brooklyn savings bank handed over the money and the man stuffed it into a brown paper bag and fled, police said.

Murray, Kentucky

Dear Sir:

I have just received from my mother the accounts of the dedication of the airport. We who have sent so much time in the air feel that Murray (our home town) has taken a giant step forward.

We remember another Murray airport, established, owned and operated by Vernon C. Ward with Gene Graham as flight instructor. A glance at my flight logbook reveals that almost 5000 hours of flying have passed since I last flew from this old airport.

Marion Field. This field was not the beginning since it followed the Knapp pre-World War II flying field. But from 1946 through 1948, we flew with optimism for an aviation future for Murray. My learned to fly there — Toy Lenning, Dr. Wallace, Dan Fain, Prof. Oakley and a host of others. Many more received orientation flights there.

We felt then that the city and county should have taken over and kept this field open. But after the flood of GI students passed it folded. We who instructed hundreds of hours there have moved to other fields: Vernon C. U. S. Army; Gene Graham, newspaperman, Nashville, Tennessee; George Gibson, U. S. Air Force B-52 navigator and I am teaching SAC missile crew. Atlas missile launch procedures.

Rockefeller Leaves To Aid In Search For Missing Son

By WILLIAM J. FOX

A Dutch navy ship today rescued the companion of missing Michael Rockefeller, youngest son of the New York governor, who last was seen trying to swim to the wilderness shore of New Guinea from a disabled boat.

Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller was en route from New York to New Guinea to aid in the search for his 23-year-old son who was lost while on a search for rare native art objects. An intensive sea search was under way.

Officials at Hollandia, Dutch New Guinea, radioed a terse report to the defense ministry at The Hague, the Netherlands, saying that Rockefeller's companion, Dutch ethnologist R. S. Wassink, 34, had been picked up safely.

Fellows Diverge News

Rockefeller was informed of the possible family tragedy Sunday night, barely 48 hours after he and his wife announced they were ending their 31-year-marriage with separation and divorce. No cause was given.

Michael was one of five grown children of the couple. His twin sister, Mrs. Mary Rockefeller Strawbridge, accompanied the governor on his flight. The mother remained in seclusion near New York.

They reached San Francisco early this morning on the 10,000-mile flight to New South Pacific.

In New Guinea, Wassink was reported to have told his rescuers that he and young Rockefeller were exploring the remote and crocodile-infested south coast of the island.

Three Murray Officers On Duty With Civil Affairs Unit

FT. GORDON, Ga. — Three Murray Army officers are now on active duty here with the 439th Civil Affairs Company.

They are Maj. James M. Lassiter, Maj. William E. Dodson and Lt. Otis P. Valentine.

The 439th CA Company, whose home station was Paducah, was called to active duty Oct. 15 in the nation's defense buildup.

After training in Paducah almost two weeks, the company reported to Ft. Gordon Oct. 28. Additional personnel were added to the unit to bring it to full strength.

Called to duty for an indefinite period not to exceed one year, the civil affairs company began advanced unit training this week. Commander of the unit is Lt. Col. Charles E. Martin, Paducah.

Maj. Lassiter heads the public safety team in the unit and Maj. Dodson is chief of the economics section. Lt. Valentine is the administrative officer of a platoon.

A civil affairs unit has an unusual mission.

To the combat armys go the mission of defeating the enemy. And to a civil affairs unit goes the task of controlling civilians, refugees and displaced persons within the combat area and restoring the government and economy of the conquered or liberated land.

An even greater task is making friends of the civilian population with whom the Army must work and live.

In civilian life, Maj. Lassiter is commonwealth's attorney for the 42nd Judicial District. A protest is serving in his post while he is on active duty.

Maj. Lassiter is a member of both the Rotary Club and the Young Business Men's Club at Murray. The 42-year-old officer is a graduate of Murray State College and the University of Kentucky.

Maj. Dodson, 41, was vice president of Peoples Bank in Murray before his call to duty. He is a 1949 graduate of Murray State College.

Prior to his callup, Lt. Valentine

Hall Allen Speaker At Woman's Club

Hall Allen, columnist and author of the new Civil War history of this section, "Center of Conflict," spoke to the Saturday meeting of the Alpha Department of the Murray Woman's Club and their many guests.

Mr. Allen was introduced by Mrs. R. A. Johnston, program chairman for the meeting. Events that took place exactly 100 years ago presented a background to his topic, "The Role of Women in the War." The historian pointed out that more than four hundred women actually fought on the battle grounds. The main contribution of the women, however, was in caring for the sick and wounded. Many interesting stories of their struggles were told by Mr. Allen.

The greatest battles were not fought on the battlefield, but in the minds of men," he concluded.

Hostesses for the meeting were Miss Frances Brown, Mrs. G. C. Ashcraft, Miss Beatrice Frye, Mrs. Carlisle Hutchins and Miss Mildred Hatcher.

BIRTH ANNOUNCED

Mr. and Mrs. Bob Morton of Lynn Grove Route One announce the birth of a son born at the Murray Hospital on November 13. He has been named Robert Pace Morton. The paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Elvin Morton of Lynn Grove and the maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Pace of Pembroke, Kentucky. The couple also have a daughter, Mary Janice.

Books Two Flights

Hurrying to the scene, the governor booked passage on two flights—a Pan American World Airways flight leaving at 12 noon EST and a Qantas Airlines flight leaving at 11:30 p. m. EST.

Robert McManus, the governor's press secretary, said the party very likely would take the earlier flight.

"We can't reach any conclusions on the basis of these reports from the Hague," McManus said. "But we are pressing on ahead."

The PAA flight will take the governor's party to Tokyo, from where they will fly south aboard a chartered plane.

State's College Football Year Closing On Same Mediocre Note

by United Press International
Kentucky's college football season, except for the Kentucky-Tennessee scrap next Saturday, closed off Saturday on the same mediocre note it maintained all through the autumn, with Commonwealth teams losing three of five weekend games against out-of-state opposition.

Kentucky edged past Xavier, 9-0, and Murray State downed Southeast Missouri, 22-7, to break a four-game losing streak. Eastern Kentucky took a 20-0 shutout from Marshall in the Shrine Bowl at Ashland, Kentucky State put up a good scrap before going down to Tennessee State, 14-10, and Centre was trampled by Otterbein of Ohio, 50-14.

Marshall quarterback Ralph May threw touchdown passes on plays that covered 23, 24 and 33 yards to account for all the scoring against Eastern.

The Maroons, closing out their season with a 4-5 record, managed one drive to the Marshall three-yard line in the third period, only to lose the ball on downs.

A 51-yard return of the second half kickoff by halfback Joe Cartwright after a scoreless first half started Murray on the way to its win over Southeast Missouri, a victory that gave Murray a 4-6 record for the season.

Quarterback Tony Fioravanti passed 13 yards to sophomore Dennis Jackson for one touchdown and six yards to end Bill Ungi for two more Murray touchdowns, with freshman Harry Kotagides adding a 29-yard field goal. Freshmen and sophomores played most of the game for Murray.

Kentucky State forced Tennessee State to drive 50 yards for a fourth period score to squeeze out its 14-10 victory.

Centre's young team was completely overwhelming by Otterbein, which scored in every period.

Fancy Pants OK In Most Places

CHICAGO (UPI)—Fancy pants—in velvet, brocade and embroidered silk—are proper attire for almost any social affair except weddings and funerals.

This is the word from “Cite Turner,” a designer for Turner Toys. She believes actress Rosebud Russell gave the party brights movement real impetus when she once appeared at an Academy Awards telecast in evening trousers instead of evening gown.

“Daring” women everywhere now wear pants to black tie affairs if they're willing to risk a few upraised eyebrows,” Mrs. Turner said.

She advised the hostess planning to wear britches to let her feminine guests know.

“There's no reason why ‘pants’ can be specified in invitations just as ‘black tie’ often is.”

RED TEAR GAS—A Communist border guard in East Berlin yanks the pin of a tear gas grenade, to hurl it at photographers black tie affairs if they're willing to risk a few upraised eyebrows,” Mrs. Turner said.

Lakers Undefeated In Four Outings Squeeze By Sedalia

The Calloway County High School Lakers, under pressure for the second time this season, used their big scoring potential to good advantage Saturday night at Sedalia.

Calloway, forced into an overtime period by the battling Lions, swept away in the extra period play to preserve an unblemished record with a 61-57 win.

Versatile Don Curd and speedy Mickey Boggess spearheaded the Calloway offensive attack with 18 and 15 points respectively. Jimmy Wilson hit for 13 points. Sedalia, coached by Ken Wray, former MSC star, presented a balanced attack with three men in double figure scoring. Roger Dick and Dennis Glisson hit for 17 each and Jessie Anderson poked in 15.

Sedalia broke out on top 19-15 in the first quarter of a contest that was nip and tuck all the way. Slowly Calloway fought back to notch a 33-33 deadlock at the halftime intermission.

The determined Lakers forged ahead by three points in the third stanza of play, 46-43. But the lead was short lived and the Lions were never out of the contest in the closing quarter of action.

Both clubs had opportunities to score in the waning minutes of play but could not get a game winning basket.

Calloway broke the 55-55 fourth period tie quickly in the overtime play and made good use of the charity lane in icing their fourth win without a set-back.

The Lakers will play North Marshall at Calvert City Tuesday night.

Murray State Defeats Southeast, Missouri 22-7 Saturday; Ends Season With 4-6 Mark

The Murray State Thoroughbreds broke fast in the second half at Cape Girardeau, Missouri Saturday afternoon to defeat Southeast Missouri 22-7 before a homecoming crowd of 6,500.

It was the last game of the season for Murray, which like Cape Girardeau, went scoreless in the first half. Coach Don Shelton, looking ahead to next season, used a squad predominant with underclassmen.

The victory enabled Murray to wind up a somewhat disappointing season with a 4-6 record. Southeast Missouri, tied for second place in the M.I.A. conference, wound up with a 5-5 mark which was below their pre-season expectations.

Joe Cartwright, a 196 pound halfback, pushed Murray into the lead quickly after a 0-0 first half, returning the second period kickoff 91 yards for a touchdown.

The Indians stormed back on the ensuing kickoff returning the ball to their own 45 yard stripe. Seventeen plays later Gary Lane went over from the one and Terry Dill booted the conversion for a 7-7 tie.

Murray took Southeast's kickoff and got to its own 27. The drive that required 17 plays by the Racers was clinched by a 13 yard pass from Tony Fioravanti to Dennis Jackson for the TD. Kotagides' kick went wide and Murray enjoyed a 13-7 advantage.

Guard Lloyd Block then recovered a Cape Girardeau fumble on the Southeast 40 to set up the insurance score. Murray drove to the 22 yard line where Kotagides booted a 25 yard field goal on a fourth and long yardage situation. Kotagides' kick came with slightly more than three minutes left in the game.

Southeast fumbled the kickoff on their 42 yard line to set up Murray's last touchdown. The Thoroughbreds drove 58 yards on eight plays with Fioravanti passing to Bill Uyni for six yards and the final score. The conversion attempt failed in the waning seconds of play.

The CENTENNIAL SCRAPBOOK

The War for the Union 1861-65 in Pictures

No. 95 Same month, November 1861, framing of a constitution for a new state, West Virginia, was begun in a convention at Wheeling, a capital, Carson City, was chosen for the new Territory, set apart from Utah. West Virginia was to be the 35th state admitted to the Union, Nevada the 36th.

Nevada attracted thousands of men away from where armies were being formed and engaged. A contemporary Nevada historian wrote in far out phraseology, "... over 50,000 of the brightest, bravest, most generous, enterprising and energetic men on earth, the Knight Paladins who challenged the brute forces of Nature to combat, the soldiers who, possessed with the aura sacra fumes, faced the storm and the savage, the desert and disease, swarmed around the base of Mt. Davidson and reached out to Aurora, to Rosee and the mountains of the Humboldt. Crawling like huge flies over the bold skulls of lofty mountains, plodding across alkaline deserts which pulsed with deluding mirages under the throbbing light, camping amid rocks worn out in the conflicts of chaos, and thrown away upon the world, smiling with pick and hammer the adamantinodoors of the earth's treasure chambers, these pioneers engaged their self-appointed task ..."

That self-appointed task was the panning, digging or acquirement by other means of some of the gold and silver discovered in 1858 to exist in big quantities in the Nevada region. Samuel L. Clemens ("Mark Twain"), aged 26 in 1861, was one of the Knight Paladins who stuck to a self-appointed task in the gold fields while warfare waged fiercely in his home state of Missouri.

Doubtless there were Southerners, too, in the gold rush, but the sentiments expressed among those who swarmed along the gold and silver bearing hillsides and creeks of the Humboldt were predominantly pro-Union.

A respectable number of old-timers and transients in Nevada did not stop at mere expressions of sentiment, but marched off to war. Six companies of infantry and six companies of cavalry were raised in the Territory.

—CLARK KENNAIRD

The transcontinental line, opened in 1861, carried news east of routing action of Raoul Grady [?] of Austin, who told sacks of flour the breadth of Nevada's gold regions, auctioning them repeatedly for funds for the Sanitary Commission. (That was the Civil War forerunner of the Red Cross in taking care of wounded soldiers.)

Immunization Against Mind Change Is Plan

By DELOS CMITH
UPI Science Editor

NEW YORK (UPI)—Having added immeasurably to the ability of some people to persuade other people to change their minds, the science of psychology now is making progress in working out a counter.

This would be the ability to immunize yourself — or immunize others — against mind changes. It would be done in a way similar to that with which people are immunized against infectious diseases, like small pox.

And it can be done, said the psychological scientists, Demetrios Papageorgis of the University of Illinois and William J. McGuire of Columbia University.

They were confident because they did it experimentally, working with 73 persons who had their minds firmly made up on two propositions, namely: It's a good idea to brush one's teeth after every meal and it's wise to have a chest X-ray once a year for TB detection.

Beliefs Prove Vulnerable
It turned out to be no trick to change their minds when arguments to the contrary were presented with calculated emphasis and force. In the words of the scientists, these beliefs "proved highly vulnerable."

Then came the immunizing — the mind-vaccinations, so to speak. Before so much as suggesting to the 73 minds that the ideas were no good, the scientists fed the minds with the reasons why certain weak arguments against the ideas had to be wrong.

When the strong contrary arguments were presented with all persuasive force, the formerly shaky minds were firmed up against persuasion. They remained convinced of the worth of teeth-brushing and chest X-rays.

The similarity of this mind-vaccination to body-vaccination is striking. To immunize against an infectious viral disease, "killed" or weakened viruses are injected. They stimulate the production of antibodies which kill the infectious viruses if they ever appear.

In their report to the American Psychological Association, Papageorgis and McGuire noted the strong anti-arguments did not have to be the same one which were refuted in weakened forms in the immunization.

Create Refuting Arguments
The strong arguments could hit the ideas from different angles and still the immunization was effective, they said. They even found evidence indicating that immunized minds were more adept at creating their own refuting arguments.

The War for the Union 1861-65 in Pictures

No. 94 Confederate Marines in action against United States Marines? That picture is conjured up from the battle on sea and land in November 1861 at Port Royal, S. C., where Union forces captured Fort Walker and Beauregard and secured a base midway between Charleston and Savannah blockade operations. As told here earlier, one of the first steps of Stephen Mallory after he became Confederate Secretary of Navy early in 1861, was to institute a C.S.A. Marine Corps. While only about a fifth of the U. S. Navy's regular officers went over to the Rebels, half of the U. S. Marine Corps officer personnel did so. Lloyd J. Beall was made their commandant under the Stars and Bars flag. Seemingly, Commodore Josiah Tattnall had some of the Confederate Marines aboard the Confederate flotilla with which he tried to fight off the strong U. S. Navy force that attacked the Port Royal fortifications in preparation for the landing of troops. U. S. Marines were in Union Commodore Samuel F. Dupont's squadron in the operation. A larger body of Marines, under Brig. Gen. Alfred Ellet, was with Commodore David D. Porter's Mississippi fleet which cut the Confederacy in two. The names of all who served as "Leathernecks" for the Union in the Secession War are known: the complete muster rolls of the corps since 1798 are in files at the Marine Corps headquarters, Washington, D. C.

—CLARK KINNAIRD

An officer (at left) and five "leathernecks" privates snapped by a cameraman during the Civil War, in which Marines literally were the first into action, if Harper's Ferry raid of John Brown is considered the opening engagement. Marines are dispatched from Washington captured Brown and men.

Old Time Recipe For Potato Bread

NEW YORK (UPI)—Spuds were strictly for bread-baking, as far as a 17th century English expert was concerned.

"The first and greatest use of potatoes for the making of bread," wrote John Forster in "England's Happiness Increased," published in London in 1664.

His recipe for "wholesome and nutritional" loaves sounds like hard work for several people: "If you will bake a bushel, you will take half a bushel of these roots, and putting them into two little nets, boy them in a kettle of water till they break between your fingers, but let them not break in the boiling; when they have boiled enough, put them onto a wicker Forster, in England's Happiness Increased, published in London in 1664.

"You must take as much wheate or barley flower, you half bushel of potato meal weights, and mix them well together with your hands; then put with it as much warm water, mix't with a little barme (yeast) as you think will make it into a very stiff dough, and as much salt as is convenient; knead it well; afterwards make loaves of it, and see that it be well baked."

Dwarfing Trees Is Ancient Art

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI)—One of the highest forms of green thumb gardening is bonsai, the ancient art of growing normal trees reduced to miniature size in containers.

Bonsai was originated in China in the 12th century, and was adapted and perfected by the Japanese about 200 years later. Many specimens now existing in Japan date back several hundred years.

John A. Dutro, Oakland bonsai expert, said bonsai, contrary to common belief, does not distort trees. It reproduces in containers unusual shapes found in nature — uprights, wind-blown, cascades and trees trampled by snow.

The bonsai grower reduces the size of his chosen tree by root and branch pruning, by bud pinching and by controlled feeding and watering. The normal shape of the tree is usually retained.

Carried to perfection, bonsai can produce a perfectly shaped evergreen tree only two or three inches tall in 100 years.

"ALEC," his father, Claude, began, "I'm going to tell you something, or a part of something."

But he did not begin just yet. He rose from his chair and walked to the stove with his coffee cup.

While he poured from the pot, and then from the milk pitcher, Alec found that he was looking at him very hard, seeming to sense new things about him.

He was a middle-sized man, neither very tall, nor stocky, but well made. His hair, once solidly black, was now salted in gray. The highlands weather had long ago darkened the city pallor of his face and nose and neck, so that he looked steady, and knowing a range as you'd ever meet.

His movements were always quick and sure and his actions and opinions decisive. He'd always been kind to Alec and, it remote, thoughtful and generous.

Yet now, as Alec watched him pour and stir his coffee, he wondered how well he really knew him.

Claude did not sit down yet, but remained near the stove holding his cup.

"One time, something happened in my work, Alec," he said. "Long ago. What it was, I can't yet say, but you'll learn in time. Everything comes out in time. But the main thing for now is that it did something to me. Up until then, the world was mine; I was younger at that time, of course, and you believe such things when you're young."

Claude paused a moment, to drink, and Alec wondered what it was. His mother crossed his mind, but it would not be her; it involved the forests in some way.

"But afterwards," Claude went on, "I changed. Things were different then. It was a matter of confidence—confidence in what I was and in what I did and was able to do. It was gone; Alec, self-doubt, and I hope you never have it, because there's no worse affliction; it's like a disease that little by little eats you away."

When he stopped that time, he looked through a window into the surrounding night. It was as if he watched an image of himself being eaten away, little by little.

"For me, these past eight years or so, it's meant the Bureau. Like any true forester, I'd take the wilderness to desk work any time, but I let myself believe that I was needed in Washington. I passed up opportunities for field work and, more lately, suggestions that I take it once more. But I don't know. Somehow I simply couldn't bring myself to face it."

It was hard to believe that Claude was speaking of himself. Alec found himself wondering if he'd heard correctly, but he knew he had; he was wide awake, he felt his feet against the floor, and he could hear Rusty's soft snoring in the quiet.

"Well, we're here now, Alec, and for you I'm glad, because there's no life like it anywhere. But I have to say that I've been sent on orders and that my handling of this forest is under fairly close observation. I suppose you might say I'm on... well, on..."

"Trial?" Alec said. It simply spilled out. He hadn't meant to say anything, and the sound of his voice frightened him.

Claude's eye lay keenly upon him, then passed on.

"Trial, yes—probation, if you like. Hard words, son, but they fit. If I fail expectations here, there'll be no other forest for me. I doubt they'll want me back in the Bureau either."

You could have a dream, Alec thought, a bad dream or a nightmare, and however frightened you became, you could still wake in sunlight. But you could not wake from this; it went on and on, as it had been going on for years.

"Alec nodded. That time, he could not speak.

"I'm glad you do," and Claude returned to his chair. "That's where you come in, you see. You and Rusty."

Alec did not rise to this either. He was too occupied in watching Claude's face, wondering how it could be that of someone else.

"I've got my hands full here, son; there's no telling yet how things will turn out. Most of my trouble's up on top, where the fire danger is acute and will be until we get rain, if ever we do. Then, too, Fred McMahon's running more stock than his permit calls for, and I've had a run-in or two with him. You can see, can't you, how it's tough and so?"

Alec nodded, though he did not know what he saw.

"And people like that pious camper, whose tent Rusty brought down, simply complicated things. I don't question his grievance, but I can't afford to have him sending raving letters to Washington. Maybe I talked this one out of it, maybe not; I don't really know yet. But I can't have it happen again. My hands are too full."

He spread his hands now, as if to show Alec how full they were or to show the shape that fullness had given them. Then he placed them palm down on
